Anvaya, for you and your family

The thread that connects generations

Team Saathi · Revision 1, 30 September 2026 · the full picture is in concept.md; the pitch to banks and insurers is in pitch-institutions.md

Nobody plans to leave suddenly

You mean to sit down one day and write it all out: the accounts, the policies, who should have the flat, where the papers are. You tell yourself there is time.

Most of us do. And sometimes, there isn't.

A father goes for his morning walk and doesn't come home. A mother who ran the whole household is gone after a short illness. There is no goodbye, no talk at the kitchen table, no folder left on the shelf. And within days, a family still in shock is facing questions nobody prepared them for:

- Which bank accounts, insurance policies and investments were there?
- Who is the nominee? Where are the papers?
- What did they want for the house, the savings, the watch?
- What are the passwords?

The one person who knew every answer is the one person they can no longer ask.

Across Asia, the money waiting to be claimed is staggering. In India, ₹72,454 crore sits in unclaimed bank deposits and nearly ₹9,000 crore in insurance.[1] In Japan, a record ¥129.2 billion went to the national treasury in a single year because no heir came forward.[2] Malaysia holds RM13.3 billion in unclaimed money.[3]

And the sudden losses leave families least prepared. In Singapore, 2 in 5 people lost before the age of 65 had never named a nominee for their CPF savings.[4]

Meet Anvaya

Anvaya is a safe, secure way to pass on everything that matters to your family. At its heart is Saathi, Anvaya's warm companion, whom you simply talk to. Over a few relaxed conversations, Saathi gathers everything your family will one day need: your accounts, your nominees, your wishes and your stories. When the time comes, it is handed safely to the person you chose, and to no one else.

No forms. No lawyer's office. Just a conversation, in your own language, whenever you have a quiet moment.

What it feels like

- Tap the microphone and just talk. It feels like a phone call with an old family friend. Saathi answers out loud, in your language, and you can interrupt any time.
- Or type, or share a photo. Snap your insurance policy and Saathi reads it for you.
- You decide what is kept. Small cards appear as you talk: a story, a piece of advice, a bank account, a family member. You tap Keep or Not now. Nothing is saved until you say so.
- Keep your real voice. For any story, you can keep the recording of you telling it, so one day your family hears it from you, not about you.
- Leave voice letters. Record a message for someone special or a moment you may not be there for: "For Priya, on her wedding day." It stays sealed until the time comes, and reaches only the person you chose.
- Saathi notices what's missing. "No nominee on this policy." "No will for the flat." You get simple next steps, each with a button.
- Your secrets stay yours. Passwords and account details are locked on your own phone. Nobody else can read them: not Anvaya, not your bank, not Saathi.
- You choose who receives them, usually a son, daughter or spouse. They accept in their own app, and you confirm a matching code.

Help when you need it, never a sales pitch

When a next step needs a professional, such as a will writer or a safe place for original papers, Saathi shows you vetted partners, with their prices up front, and explains what each one does. You compare and choose. Saathi never recommends one over another, and no partner can pay to be shown first.

If your life spans more than one place, say a flat in Karnataka and savings in Singapore, Saathi notes where everything is and shows partners who can help in each place, so your family knows where to start.

If you choose one, and only if you agree, Saathi sends them a short summary so you don't have to start from zero. Your vault is never shared with anyone.

Kind of partner	What they help with
Legal	Writing a will, registering it, succession certificates, probate
Safekeeping	Storing original papers, safe deposit lockers, digital document lockers
Your bank or insurer	Updating nominees, consolidating old accounts, claims
Claims help	Handling claims across many institutions for your family
Tax and accounts	The final tax return, closing accounts
Property	Transferring land and housing records
Licensed advisers	Financial planning, only from licensed partners

When the time comes, your family is not alone

- A family member uploads the official certificate from the registrar.
- Careful checks look for forgery or mistakes, and then two different people on our review team confirm it: one confirms the loss, the other confirms your family member's legal authority.
- A waiting period follows. If there has been a mistake, one tap on your phone cancels everything.
- The person you chose unlocks your vault on their own phone.
- They can ask Saathi, "What insurance did Papa have?", and hear the answer in your own words, with where it came from. If you never said it, Saathi says so honestly. It never guesses.
- Where you kept a recording, Saathi offers to play your real voice telling the story. And each voice letter reaches the person it was meant for.
- Saathi prepares a checklist and draft claim letters for every bank and insurer, and trusted partners are there for what comes next.

Looked after at every step

Something this precious needs watching over, not just at the end, but all along the way.

- You hear first. If anyone ever reports your passing, we tell you straight away, with a link to cancel. One tap, and nothing moves.
- Big changes take a breath. Changing who receives your vault, or who your nominee is, takes a short pause and your own confirmation. If the change comes from a phone we haven't seen before, we check with you first.
- Your voice alone can't change anything important. We always ask you to confirm on your own screen, so even a copy of your voice could never take over.
- No one can pressure you through us. If it ever seems someone is pushing you to change your wishes, Saathi won't confront anyone. It simply holds the change, and checks with you privately, later, when you're alone. You stay in charge.
- We watch ourselves too. Two different people approve every handover. They can't pick which cases they review, and we keep an eye out for anything unusual in how our own team works.
- Our checks keep learning. The tricks people try change over time, so our checks are updated as new ones appear.

Vikram's story

> Vikram, 58, Bengaluru, opens Anvaya one evening and taps the microphone. "My first job was at a textile mill in Mysore in 1987. I gave my whole first salary to my mother." Saathi asks how his mother reacted. A card appears: Story: First job and salary → Keep.
>
> Later: "I have an LIC policy ending in 4492. Please make Ajay the nominee." Saathi adds the policy, asks who Ajay is ("my nephew"), and reminds him to submit the change to LIC too.
>
> He says the flat in Mysore should go to his wife, Meena. Saathi notices there is no will and shows three will writers with their prices. Vikram picks one.
>
> Years later, Vikram leaves us, suddenly, as he always feared he might. His daughter Priya is not ready; nobody ever is. But she is not lost. She asks "What insurance did Papa have?" and gets the policy, the nominee and a draft claim letter, all in her father's own words.

> Then she asks about his first job, and Saathi asks, "Would you like to hear him tell it?" And there is Vikram, in his own voice, talking about the salary he gave to his mother.
>
> He had left one more thing: a voice letter, "For Priya, on her wedding day".

Our promises to you

- You decide. Nothing is saved until you tap Keep, and nothing is shared with a partner until you agree.
- No made-up answers. If you never said it, Saathi says so.
- Your real voice, never a copy. Your family hears the recordings you chose to keep and the letters you left. We never clone your voice or build an avatar of you.
- No advice we aren't licensed to give. Legal and financial advice comes only from licensed partners.
- No paid influence. Partners can't buy a better place or a recommendation.
- Your secrets stay locked until the right person, and only that person, receives them after careful checks.
- Watched over all along the way. We look out for anyone trying to misuse what you leave, at every step, and you always hear from us first.
- Your family's privacy matters too. Family members can ask to be added. While you are here, only you can let them in.

What it costs

Anvaya is a simple yearly plan, for less than most of us spend on the small things we never think twice about, and a fraction of what a family can lose when nobody knows.

- Try it first. Your first conversations with Saathi are on us, so you can feel how it works before you choose a plan.
- For you, or for the whole family. Choose a plan for yourself, or one that brings your spouse and parents in too.
- It may already be included. If your bank or insurer offers Anvaya, they may cover your plan.
- Partners set their own fees, and you always see them before you choose.
- Your family never pays to receive what you left them. The handover, and a generous allowance of questions to Saathi, checklists and draft letters, are included. If they need more, they can add it later.

Download Anvaya from the app store, or look for it inside your bank's app. It is the same Saathi either way, and it records accounts at every bank and insurer, not just one.

Nobody can choose when they leave. Anvaya makes sure the people you love are not left without answers.

Sources

1. Bank deposits as of 28 January 2026: Minister of State for Finance, written reply in Parliament, reported in Free Press Journal. Insurance (₹8,974 crore) as of 28 February 2026: Press Information Bureau, 24 March 2026. ↩
2. Financial year 2024, Supreme Court of Japan figures reported by Bloomberg, 8 December 2025. ↩
3. As of April 2025, Accountant General of Malaysia, reported by Free Malaysia Today. ↩
4. 2023 data, CPF Board. ↩